A.—A.—A.—THE HOWARD METHOD.

SINGING AND SPEAKING.

No better prior that the Howard method is original and thoroughly practical could be desired than the fact that its principles and exercises may be reduced to writing and be so exactly explained that pupils at a distance who can receive only written lessons have been greatly benefited, as their enthusiastic testimonials declare.

"When the course began my voice had become greatly impaired, not only for singing but even for speaking, from practising according to the system commonly taught. Now, after a comparatively short course of lessons, I am no less surprised than pleased at the reault. * " Improvement is very marked not only in general quality of time but also, in power and case of delivery."—T. A. Connolly, lock box 176, Washington, D. C.

"Your analytical method is feaching me how to command the requisite conditions for easy, natural and powerful intonation, and it teaches much more that is indispensable to to the artist." I size value your method for the intellectual disciplination. ton attien, and it teaches much more that is indispensable to to the artist.

"I also value your method for the intellectual discipline it affords; and, besides gratefully neknowizedging my personal indebtedness to you. I will add that I hope to place my present and future pupils under similar obligations to you. "MARY J. SNYDER, Riverside Institute, Lyons, lows," If such results may be shown by pupils who never come under the eye of the teacher, how much greater and more rapid progress will be made by vis-a-vis pupils. Mr. Howard's list of pupils includes correspondence in Canada and France, while his city hours are filled mainly by pressional scholars, who live by their voices, and, by sade experience with other methods, are quick to appreciate the bonofits which his exercises, based on physiological principles, will speedly confer. Three-faid power, an enlarged complex of the pupils is led by regular approaches to reach those higher forms of execution, style and expression which the exacting demands of artistic singing and dramatic reading require. Address Mr. HOWARD by mail, or call in person for pamphlet or interview from 2 to 3 daily (Monday and Thursday excepted), at his office, 30 Union square over Pond's music store).
